Scyborg to Scyborg – Making Constellations & Assemblages: Riding the Ruins in Search of Third World Universities, and Letting Witches Fly

not the end point, instead they spray during flight. It is how the confines and conformities of the institution can be reassembled, even for a brief moment, to be used as one is on their trajectory. Trajectories that do not require linearity in their genealogies. The stacking of such genealogies are what has built the ivory tower and promotes its constant fortification and buttressing.

The witches flight produces technologies others can then pick up and use in their own assemblages, to spark the energy for another's flight. The work is not alone, it does not centralize one of us, it requires kin to assess self. Today's scyborg is another days scyborg supporter. We can't always be subverting, the burnout is real. We will age and lose sight of potentials and possibilities, we will eventually need to rest and put our broomsticks down. But this does not mean we will become completely obsolete, we must then remember to help keep the runways ready, to keep them as clear as possible. So the next flights can go further, higher and in more directions. And when the time comes when a scyborg is unplugged, when it must leave the matrix of the institution, cutting off access to powerful technologies we must still continue on, keeping the stories and holding the scyborgs who are still plugged in to the system. We will be there to welcome them home.

NOTICE:

Greetings!
I hope this message finds you well, we are writing to make you aware that given your technological condition you are now exposed to being scyborg. Below you will find a basic overview of the condition. Although the condition has existed for as long as we can remember, the condition and what it produces has been more formalized by la paperson and summarized here. This condition will not define you and is considered additional to your current status. On site learning is always available and constantly being developed. Trial and error are part of the process. Please do not be alarmed or concerned, this condition is only temporary. At this time there is no treatment available although we stay optimistic for a decolonizing, equitable world. Please feel free to reach out if you have any questions. We are usually somewhere in the institution/organization rewiring or assembling a former colleague's ruins.
— scyborg

P.S. I know this is a lot to take in but it will start to make sense the more you operate with this condition in the institution. I will check in when I can and try and answer any questions you have as you learn to work with this condition. For now I will leave you with what a scyborg once said to us, we are thinking of using it as our motto for group meetings "Only the bad guys build things that last forever. Scyborg friend, another world is dreaming your dreams."[1]

… Oh and try to remember to wear your safety gear when assembling. Those ruins can have some hidden sharp pieces.

scyborg
Duration of condition: Impermanent[2]
Who is susceptible: Individuals with an agentive body[3]

Description:
The condition of scyborg is always an impermanent one. It recognizes that as a subject within an institution there is a holding of privilege and a function as a "technologically enhanced colonial subject."[4] There is an acceptance that it is not a position of liberation.

> Scyborg is not an identity… Scyborgs are not total beings, nor whole beings, nor perfectly discrete beings for that matter. Scyborg is not ontological. Scyborg is more like an adjective. It describes a technological condition of being embedded in an assemblage of machines. Different scyborgs have different powers shaping assemblages. What your particular powers are is important for you to figure out.[5]

As a scyborg you are constructed in assemblage and identified through assemblage.[6] You operate through assemblages such as the university as you appropriate its technologies.[7] With these technologies you assemble machines, machines made from the reorganization and rewiring of institutional machines for other purposes, "subverting the master code of its makers."[8]

> "Categorical thinking is not the point… Scyborgs are ideologically-agnostic. Which creates possibilities in every direction of the witches flight – not just possibilities that we like. This is why some of you are not always decolonial in behavior. Thankfully, your newly assembled machine will break down. Some other scyborgs will reassemble the busted gears to drive decolonial dreams. To dream is to ride the ruin."[9]

Through these assemblages and re-assemblages scyborg try to answer the question "to what, and whether the free university will be decolonizing."[10] This answer is not sought to rescue the university "from its own neoliberal desires but rather for assembling decolonizing machines, to plug the university into decolonizing assemblages."[11]

FOLLOWING UP:

Greetings scyborg!
I wanted to follow up on our brief conversation when we were riding ruins past each other in the hall yesterday. You had asked about the witches flight that was mentioned in your condition notice.

As we had discussed on break we use the title scyborg, "an alternative spelling, or assemblage, a slippage between cyborg and system."[12] A scyborg reassembles colonial systems and ways of doing/operating, what we call technologies. "Technologies are the master's tools, and yet they will never be just that, any more than you are the master's tool."[13] When we speak of the witches broom and the flight that can be taken it is acknowledging a directional path, a place of taking off from. Pulling assembled systems and technologies to subvert, alter and create new assemblages/technologies. These creations are
